CODE OF CONDUCT

Code of Conduct and Affirmation

Dear colleagues:

Our integrity and reputation depend on our ability to do the right thing, even when it's not the easy thing. Our commitment to responsible, honest and ethical behavior was at the heart of the codes of conduct of both heritage firms, and it remains so at JPMorgan Chase today.

The company's new Code of Conduct states clearly that no one should ever sacrifice integrity -- or give the impression that they have -- even if they think it would help JPMorgan Chase's business. The new Code replaces similar policies that existed in our predecessor firms.

We believe that each of us is accountable for our actions. You can look to the Code of Conduct to guide your decisions in a variety of circumstances. However, no rulebook can anticipate every situation. Ultimately, the personal integrity and honesty of every JPMorgan Chase employee defines the character of our company.

If you manage employees, you should look for ways, through example and communication, to ensure that employees under your supervision understand and comply with the Code and other relevant policies. For questions about a rule or how it applies in a particular situation, consult your manager or the Legal and Compliance Department or the Office of the Secretary. All employees will be asked to affirm their understanding of and compliance with the Code of Conduct early in 2005.

We trust in your ability to abide by both the spirit and the letter of the Code of Conduct's rules and policies. We count on you to help JPMorgan Chase continue to earn the trust of our customers, our shareholders and each other.

CODE OF CONDUCT

1. ADMINISTRATION OF THE CODE OF CONDUCT

The Code of Conduct sets forth certain minimum expectations that JPMorgan Chase has for you. You are expected to conduct the firm's business in full compliance with both the letter and the spirit of the law, the Code, and any other policies and procedures that may be applicable to you. The “firm” and “JPMorgan Chase” as used throughout the Code mean JPMorgan Chase & Co. and all its direct and indirect subsidiaries.

The Code is intended to provide general guidance regarding your conduct as an employee or director of JPMorgan Chase. Note that other policies and procedures are listed at the end of many Code sections, with an electronic link on the intranet edition of the Code. These listed items provide more detailed information about the relevant subject and may include additional requirements with which you must comply. However, these lists are not an exhaustive consideration of all policies and procedures that may be applicable to you, and you are responsible for knowing which policies and procedures, whether or not listed here, apply to you, and for understanding and complying with them. You should refer to these documents where appropriate. Consult any of the persons listed in Section 1.4 if you have questions.

At the end of the Code, you will find a section of Definitions and Examples.

The term “Senior Manager” is used in the Code to refer to a person in your management chain who is a member of the Executive Committee or who reports directly to a member of the Executive Committee. Where the Code requires notice to, or approval of, a Senior Manager, directors and Executive Committee members should notify, or obtain approval from, the Office of the Secretary. Where the Code requires notice to, or approval of, a Compliance officer, members of corporate groups that have no assigned officer may notify or obtain the approval of the Office of the Secretary instead.

Any waiver of the provisions of this Code for an executive officer or a director must be made by the Board of Directors and will be promptly disclosed to JPMorgan Chase & Co. stockholders.

The Code of Conduct does not create any rights to continued employment and is not an employment contract.

1.1. Persons subject to the Code of Conduct

The Code applies to employees and directors of JPMorgan Chase & Co. and its direct and indirect subsidiaries. Employees of joint ventures and entities in which JPMorgan Chase holds venture capital investments are not subject to the Code except to the extent the Legal and Compliance Department determines otherwise. The provisions of the Code described in Section 5.11 also apply to former employees.

If any provision contravenes or is less restrictive than the applicable law of any jurisdiction, the local law will apply. Similarly, certain business units have policies that are more restrictive than the Code, and those more restrictive policies will apply to those units. You are responsible for understanding and complying with these laws and policies.

1.2. Consultants, agents and temporary workers

In general, consultants, agents and temporary workers are expected to comply with the underlying principles of the Code. Specific arrangements with such persons will vary depending on the relationship to the firm. Consult your Compliance officer if you have questions about your obligations or those of others.

1.3. Consequences of violating the Code

Compliance with the Code and with other policies and procedures applicable to you is a term and condition of employment by JPMorgan Chase. Violations of any laws that relate to the operation of our business, the Code, or other applicable policies and procedures, or failure to cooperate as directed by the firm with an internal or external investigation, may result in corrective action, up to and including immediate termination of employment. The firm will take all reasonable actions to enforce the Code. In cases where a violation of the Code could cause the firm irreparable harm, it may seek injunctive relief in addition to monetary damages.

1.4. Questions about the Code

Employees who have questions about the Code or other policies and procedures, or about how a particular rule applies in a specific situation, should contact:

- their manager
- their local Compliance officer
- the Legal Department
- their Human Resources representative
- the Office of the Secretary

Contact information is included in the Contacts List at the end of the Code.

The following lists some of the common situations in which you may have obligations under the Code and refers you to the relevant section(s) of the Code. You should not use this list as a substitute for familiarity with all provisions of the Code.

Gifts to customers, suppliers, or others doing business with JPMorgan Chase: You wish to make a gift or extend an invitation to a person doing business with JPMorgan Chase.	6.6
Charitable solicitations at work: You wish to ask co-workers, customers, or suppliers to contribute to a charitable cause with which you are involved.	6.7
Investment activity: You, or a member of your family, are making personal investments that may be subject to the firm's policies and procedures regarding personal account trading.	7
Post-employment obligations : You anticipate leaving JPMorgan Chase, and you are not certain what continuing obligations you may have after your employment is ended.	5.11

1.5. Obligation to report violations

You must promptly report any suspected violation of the Code or any applicable law or regulation, whether the suspected violation involves you or another person subject to the Code. In addition, you should report any illegal conduct, or conduct that violates the underlying principles of the Code, by any of our customers, suppliers, contract workers, business partners, or agents. If something doesn't look right, say something.

Report violations as follows:

Matters involving harassment or discrimination must be reported to your manager, to the Employee Relations Unit of Human Resources, or to your HR representative.

Matters involving fraudulent acts, including acts by third parties against the firm or personal dishonesty by an employee, must be reported to the Fraud Prevention and Investigation Unit of the General Auditing Department.

If you believe that an official at a high level of the firm is involved, report to the General Auditor.

All other matters should be reported to the Legal and Compliance Department.

If the persons to whom you report a violation are not responsive, or if there is reason to believe that reporting to the persons indicated above is inappropriate in a particular case, then you should contact one of the firm's General Counsels or any other Executive Committee member.

1.6. Current version of the Code

The current edition of the Code is posted on the intranet. It may be amended from time to time, and all amendments are effective immediately upon posting. It is your responsibility to review the Code from time to time to ensure that you are in compliance.

1.7. Affirmation

You are required to affirm, either in writing or electronically, that you have read and understood the Code and that you will comply with it. This affirmation is required of new employees when they are hired and of new directors when they are elected to office. In addition, periodically all employees will be required to re-affirm their understanding of and compliance with the then-current Code.

2. DIVERSITY

JPMorgan Chase is committed to providing an inclusive and nondiscriminatory working environment in which all employees are valued and empowered to succeed. The firm prohibits discrimination or harassment on the basis of race, color, national origin, citizenship status, creed, religion, religious affiliation, age, sex, marital status, sexual orientation, gender identity, disability, veteran status, and any other status protected under any applicable law. Each of us is responsible for ensuring implementation of this policy and maintaining a business environment free of harassment and intimidation.

Likewise, you may not unlawfully discriminate in your dealings with current or prospective customers and suppliers.

The firm's Travel and Entertainment Policies preclude reimbursement from, or payment by, JPMorgan Chase for membership in or expenses incurred at organizations with discriminatory practices.

3. CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION

We are all responsible for the safeguarding of confidential information, whether it is information entrusted to us by our customers, information regarding JPMorgan Chase's businesses and activities, or information about other employees.

3.1. Information about the firm, its customers, its employees, and others

You may have access to confidential information related to the firm's business. Information related to the firm's business includes information about the firm, as well as information related to the firm's customers, counterparties, or advisory clients (all of which the Code refers to as customers), business partners, suppliers, and your fellow employees.

You may not, either during your period of service or thereafter, directly or indirectly use or disclose to anyone any such confidential information, except as permitted by the Code and other policies applicable to you.

You should observe the following principles when dealing with information relating to the firm's business:

- Assume that most information that you have about the firm and its business, or about its past, present or prospective customers, suppliers, and employees, is confidential, unless the contrary is clear.
- Treat all personal information about individuals as confidential.
- Before sharing confidential information with others in the firm, be sure that you are permitted to do so. Do not disclose confidential customer information to other employees who are not involved with the transaction or service for which the information was provided to the firm --- even if you believe the disclosure might be useful in the context of other firm business --- unless you are authorized to do so.
- Do not disclose confidential information to anyone outside the firm unless you are authorized to do so. Where such disclosure is authorized, a confidentiality or privacy agreement may be required; check with the Legal Department.

- If you are permitted to share information, use your judgment to limit the amount of information shared and disclose it only on a need-to-know basis in order to provide the services we are engaged to provide. Ensure that the recipient knows the information is confidential and has been instructed about restrictions on further use and dissemination.
- Comment or provide information on matters related to the firm's business only if it is part of your job function or you are otherwise authorized to do so.
- Protect confidential information when communicating electronically -- for instance by e-mail or through the internet.
- Remember that all forms of communication are covered, including written, telephonic, and electronic communications such as website chatrooms, e-mail, and instant messaging.
- Consult your manager or your Compliance officer if you have any question about whether information can be shared.

3.2. Prior Employer's confidential information and trade secrets

Do not disclose to JPMorgan Chase or use during your employment at JPMorgan Chase any confidential information or trade secret of a prior employer, unless the information or trade secret is then public information through no action of your own.

3.3. Special rules regarding customer information and data privacy legislation

Each of us has a special responsibility to protect the confidentiality of information related to customers. This responsibility may be imposed by law, may arise out of agreements with our customers, or may be based on policies or practices adopted by the firm. Certain jurisdictions have regulations relating specifically to the privacy of individuals and/or business and institutional customers. Various business units and geographic areas within JPMorgan Chase have internal policies regarding customer privacy. You should be familiar with those that apply to you. Customer information should never be disclosed to anyone outside the firm except as permitted by law and in the proper conduct of our business, where disclosure is required by legal process, or where the Legal and Compliance Department otherwise determines it is appropriate.

3.4. Publications, speeches, and other communications relating to JPMorgan Chase's business

You should be alert to situations in which you may be perceived as representing or speaking for the firm, especially in public communications (including internet chatrooms, bulletin boards, etc.). You should not make any statements on behalf of JPMorgan Chase, or regarding JPMorgan Chase, its business, or its customers, unless it is part of your job or you are otherwise specifically authorized to do so. Refer all media inquiries to Marketing & Communications' Media Relations Office.

Public testimony (as an expert witness or otherwise), publications and speaking engagements relating to the firm's business are subject to pre-clearance. Subpoenas, media inquiries, supplier forums, and requests from customers or suppliers for testimonials or endorsements should be handled in accordance with applicable procedures. Before engaging in any of these activities, consult your Compliance officer and the relevant policies and procedures.

4. INSIDE INFORMATION AND THE CHINESE WALL POLICY

Buying or selling securities while in possession of material non-public information is prohibited, as is the communication of that information to others.

4.1. Inside Information

If you are aware of inside information,

- you may not buy or sell securities (including equity securities, bonds and other debt securities, convertible securities, derivatives, options, any stock index including any such security as an element, and any other financial instruments) that may be affected by that information, either for your own account or any account over which you exercise control, alone or with others.
- you may not pass along any inside information expressly or by way of making a recommendation for the purchase or sale of such securities based upon inside information.

"Inside information" is material, nonpublic information about the securities, activities, or financial condition of a corporation, public entity or other issuer of securities. Material, nonpublic information concerning market developments may also be construed to be inside information.

Information is "material" if it could have an impact on the market price of securities involved or if it is likely that a reasonable investor would consider the information important in deciding whether to purchase or sell the securities. Information may be material to one issuer but not to another, or to certain securities of an issuer but not to all securities of that issuer.

Information should be considered "nonpublic" unless it is clearly public. Information is deemed public once it has been publicly announced or otherwise disseminated in a manner that makes the information available to investors generally.

Likewise, you may not buy or sell securities if you have knowledge of proposed customer trades, trades by JPMorgan Chase, or forthcoming research reports regarding those securities or the issuer of those securities, and you may not pass along this information to others in any way.

These prohibitions are applicable no matter how you acquired the inside information. They are applicable to the securities of JPMorgan Chase as well as to those of other companies.

These prohibitions do not apply to qualified transactions pursuant to certain planned acquisition or selling programs, such as so-called 10b5-1 programs. These prohibitions also do not apply to legally permissible transactions with the issuer of the securities, or with other persons having the same information you have (a circumstance likely to be relevant only in the context of private securities). Before engaging in any transactions you believe to be permissible under this paragraph, you must consult with your Compliance officer.

4.2. The Chinese Wall policy and other information barriers

The firm's Chinese Wall policy refers to a system of information barriers designed to limit the flow of inside information from areas that routinely have access to such information, such as Investment Banking, Capital Markets, Commercial Lending, Credit, Restructuring, and Mergers and Acquisitions ("insider areas"), to those areas that trade in or sell securities or provide investment advice regarding securities, such as Sales, Trading, Research, and Asset Management ("public areas"). The Chinese Wall policy prohibits anyone in an insider area from communicating inside information, however obtained, to anyone in a public area, subject to limited exceptions approved by the relevant Compliance officer.

In addition, some business areas within the firm require procedures that address more specifically the information flows within those business areas. These are also sometimes referred to as Chinese Walls.

Employees subject to the firm's Chinese Wall policy, or to other information barriers designed to meet specific business needs, are responsible for compliance with the provisions of applicable policies.

5. OTHER BUSINESS CONDUCT

We are all expected to conduct the firm's business in accordance with the highest ethical standards, respecting the firm's customers, suppliers, and other business counterparties, dealing responsibly with the firm's assets, and complying with applicable legal and regulatory requirements.

5.1. Assets of the firm

You are expected to protect the firm's assets as well as the assets of others that come into your custody.

The firm's assets include not only financial assets such as cash and securities and physical assets such as furnishings, equipment and supplies, but also customer relationships and intellectual property such as information about products, services, customers, systems and people. All property created, obtained or compiled by or on behalf of the firm, including customer lists, directories, files, reference materials and reports, computer software, data processing systems, computer programs and databases, belongs to the firm.

The firm's assets should be used only for the conduct of the firm's business, except where limited incidental personal use is authorized by the Code or other applicable policies.

5.2. Intellectual property

Any invention, discovery, development, concept, idea, process or work related to the firm's business, written or otherwise, whether or not it can be patented or copyrighted, that you develop alone or with others during your employment with the firm (all of which are referred to as "Company Inventions") belongs to the firm. If a Company Invention is something that can be copyrighted and you create it as a part of your job with the firm or because the firm asks you to create it, it is a "work made for hire." The firm is not required to acknowledge your role in the creation of any Company Inventions or have your permission to modify, expand, or benefit from it.

As a condition of your employment, you assign exclusively to the firm all of your right, title and interest in Company Inventions. You further agree to assist the firm in obtaining for its own benefit intellectual property rights, including any patents and copyrights, in the firm Inventions and agree to deliver any documents that may be requested to assure, record or perfect your assignment of the Company Inventions to the firm.

5.3. Telephones, e-mail, internet, and other electronic communications devices

Telephones, electronic mail (e-mail) systems and other electronic communications devices provided by JPMorgan Chase, whether in the workplace or elsewhere, are the property of the firm and should be used for business purposes; however, limited incidental personal use is permitted, consistent with the Code and all other policies of the firm.

The use of e-mail, the firm's intranet and the internet must conform to the policies of JPMorgan Chase. E-mail and internet systems may be used to transmit or provide access to confidential information only when such information is adequately protected and transmitting such information is necessary for business purposes.

Among other things, the following are prohibited in electronic communications:

- statements, which, if made in any other forum, would violate any of our policies, including policies against discrimination and harassment, participation in impermissible or illegal activities (such as gambling or the use and sale of controlled substances), and the misuse of confidential information.
- accessing, downloading, uploading, saving, or sending sexually oriented or other offensive materials.

JPMorgan Chase considers all data and communications transmitted through, received by, or contained in the firm's electronic or telephonic equipment and systems to be JPMorgan Chase's property and, subject to applicable laws and regulations, JPMorgan Chase reserves the right to monitor, review, and disclose all such data and communications as it deems appropriate. You should have no expectation of privacy when using such resources.

Information Technology Risk Management Policies

5.4. Internal controls, record-keeping, and reporting

Internal accounting controls and record-keeping policies have been established in order for JPMorgan Chase to meet both legal and business requirements. You are expected to maintain and adhere to these controls and policies.

The falsification of any book, record or account relating to the business of JPMorgan Chase, its customers, or its suppliers, or to the disposition of assets of the firm, its customers, or its suppliers (including without limitation the submission of any false personal expense statement, claim for reimbursement of a non-business expense or a false employee record or claim under an employee benefit plan), is prohibited.

The firm's record-keeping policies include policies for records and document retention and destruction. Notwithstanding any other provision of document retention policies, no document or record may be destroyed if you have been advised or otherwise should recognize that it may be relevant to a pending or threatened legal or regulatory proceeding, except in accordance with procedures approved by the head of the Litigation Group in the Legal Department or one of his/her direct reports.

It is of critical importance that JPMorgan Chase's filings with regulatory authorities be accurate and timely. Information provided to those involved in preparation of the firm's disclosures to regulators and investors should be complete, accurate, and informative.

5.5. Limits of your authority

Your authority to act on behalf of JPMorgan Chase is limited by various laws, regulations, corporate charters, bylaws, and board resolutions as well as internal policies and procedures. You may not sign any documents, or otherwise represent or exercise authority, on behalf of any JPMorgan Chase entity unless you are specifically authorized to do so. Be aware of limits on your authority and do not take any action that exceeds those limits.

Delegation of authority, where permissible under corporate policies and otherwise appropriate, should be reasonably limited in scope and subject to appropriate ongoing oversight.

5.6. Business relationships

5.6.1. Fair dealing

You should always endeavor to deal fairly and in good faith with the firm's customers, suppliers, competitors, business partners, regulators, and employees. It is our policy not to take unfair advantage of others through manipulation, concealment, abuse of privileged information, misrepresentation of material facts, or any other unfair dealing practice.

5.6.2. Customer, supplier, and employee relationships

During your employment you may not, directly or indirectly:

- solicit for a competitor, or divert or attempt to divert from doing business with JPMorgan Chase, any customer, identified prospective customer, supplier, or other person or entity with whom JPMorgan Chase has or had a business relationship.
- solicit JPMorgan Chase's employees for employment or engagement elsewhere or solicit or induce any employee, consultant, independent contractor, agent, or supplier to leave JPMorgan Chase.

5.7. Money laundering and the USA Patriot Act

JPMorgan Chase has established policies, procedures and internal controls designed to assure compliance with international laws and regulations regarding money laundering and terrorist financing, including relevant provisions of the Bank Secrecy Act and the USA Patriot Act in the United States and similar legislation in other countries. You should be familiar with, and comply with, these policies, procedures and controls. You should also understand your obligations to:

- know your customer and your customer's use of the firm's products and services.
- get proper training if you are identified as being in a job that poses a risk of money laundering or terrorist financing.
- be alert to and report unusual or suspicious activity to the designated persons within your line of business or region, including your Compliance officer or Risk Manager responsible for anti-money laundering compliance.

5.8. Tying of products

"Tying" arrangements, under which the availability or price of one product is conditioned on the customer's purchase of another product, are illegal under some circumstances. United States Federal laws govern tying arrangements involving bank subsidiaries of JPMorgan Chase & Co.

Related Link:

Anti-Tying Policy

5.9. Bribery and the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act

Federal law of the United States and the laws of many other countries prohibit bribes, kickbacks or other similar remuneration or consideration given to any person or organization, such as a domestic or foreign government official, political party or candidate for political office, or to any intermediaries, such as agents, attorneys or other consultants, in order to attract or retain business or to influence any governmental decision or action. Offering or paying such remuneration or consideration is strictly prohibited.

In addition, you may not accept any such payments in connection with any business decision or transaction, even if such payments are customary in the particular country involved.

5.10. International boycotts and economic sanctions

The U.S. antiboycott law prohibits certain actions to comply with or support an unsanctioned foreign boycott against a country friendly to the United States. The prohibited actions include refusing to do business in a certain country, furnishing information about a person in response to a boycott-related request, and implementing a letter of credit that contains a condition related to any of the prohibited actions.

The U.S. economic sanctions regulations prohibit U.S. persons, including U.S. financial institutions, their foreign branches and non-U.S. affiliates, from exporting financial services to certain foreign governments and their specially designated nationals named by the Office of Foreign Assets Control. These regulations also require that assets of these governments and persons be frozen. All JPMorgan Chase branches and subsidiaries are required to establish policies and procedures to ensure that their customers (and potential customers) are not on the OFAC list. You should be familiar with the policies and procedures that apply to you.

5.11. Post-employment responsibilities

As a condition of continued employment with JPMorgan Chase, employees will have certain responsibilities after their employment with JPMorgan Chase terminates. These responsibilities include an obligation to return all firm assets in their possession, to maintain the confidentiality of information, to refrain from insider trading based on information obtained in the course of employment by JPMorgan Chase, and, if requested, to assist JPMorgan Chase with investigations, litigation, and the protection of intellectual property relating to their employment. Senior level employees have additional obligations for one year after they leave JPMorgan Chase, including prohibitions on the solicitation of JPMorgan Chase officers and customers. You are responsible for knowing which post-employment restrictions and requirements apply to you.

6. CONFLICTS OF INTEREST

Employees must never permit their personal interests to conflict with or to appear to conflict with the interests of the firm. When faced with a situation involving a potential conflict, ask yourself whether public disclosure of the matter could embarrass JPMorgan Chase or you, or would lead an outside observer to believe a conflict exists, whether or not one actually does. You must disclose to the Office of the Secretary all potential conflicts of interest, including those in which you may have been placed inadvertently due to either business or personal relationships with customers, suppliers, business associates, or competitors of JPMorgan Chase, or with other JPMorgan Chase employees.

6.1. Personal relationships

You may not act on behalf of JPMorgan Chase in any transaction or business relationship involving yourself, members of your family, or other persons or organizations with which you or your family have any significant personal connection or financial interest. These matters should be handled by an authorized unrelated employee.

You may not engage in self-dealing or otherwise trade upon your position with JPMorgan Chase or accept or solicit any personal benefit from a client or supplier not generally available to other persons or made available to you due to your position with JPMorgan Chase (except in accordance with our policies regarding the occasional acceptance of gifts).

Negotiating with JPMorgan Chase on behalf of others with whom you or your family have a significant connection should be avoided if there is a risk that your involvement would be perceived as self-dealing or trading upon your position with the firm.

Hiring or working with relatives, or someone with whom you have a romantic relationship, is subject to specific restrictions. You should be aware of those limitations if they apply to you.

Employment of Relatives

6.2. Personal finances

Because of the nature of our business, any improper handling of your personal finances could undermine your credibility and that of JPMorgan Chase. Also, a precarious personal financial position might appear to influence actions or judgments you make on behalf of JPMorgan Chase.

You may not borrow money (other than nominal amounts) from or lend money to other employees, customers or suppliers, or act as a guarantor, co-signer or surety or in any other similar capacity for customers, suppliers or other employees. You should borrow only from reputable organizations that regularly lend money. If you borrow from any financial institution, the loan must be obtained on non-preferential terms.

In general, you may not participate in any other personal financial transactions with fellow employees, customers or suppliers. This prohibition includes shared investments (unless they are either widely held or held pursuant to firm sponsored co-investment plans) and investment clubs.

The foregoing limitations do not apply to:

- borrowing from, or acting as guarantor, co-signer, or surety for, relatives or close personal friends.
- borrowing on non-preferential terms from a customer that is in the financial services business.

- making consumer credit purchases on non-preferential terms from a customer or supplier in the normal course of that customer/supplier's business.

6.3. Outside business and not-for-profit activities; outside employment

6.3.1. General

Your outside activities must not reflect adversely on JPMorgan Chase or give rise to a real or apparent conflict of interest with your duties to the firm. You must be alert to potential conflicts of interest and be aware that you may be asked to discontinue any outside activity if a potential conflict arises. You may not, directly or indirectly:

- accept a business opportunity from someone doing business or seeking to do business with JPMorgan Chase that is made available to you because of your position with the firm.
- take for yourself a business opportunity belonging to the firm.
- engage in a business opportunity that competes with any of the firm's businesses.

Employees may not work for, or serve as a director or officer of or adviser to, a competitor of the firm. Competitors include unrelated depository institutions, credit unions, lenders, investment banks, insurers, and securities brokers, dealers, and underwriters. You should also not invest in a competitor (other than investments in securities of publicly traded companies).

Outside activities must not interfere with your job performance or require such long hours as to affect your physical or mental effectiveness. Your job at JPMorgan Chase should always be your first work priority.

You may accept appointments as a personal fiduciary only for family members and close personal friends. However, you may not act as a personal fiduciary for a personal friend if the friendship developed in the context of a JPMorgan Chase customer relationship.

6.3.2. Required pre-clearance of outside activities

Pre-clearance is required for certain outside activities, as described below.

- Outside business activities. Subject to the exclusions listed below, you are required to pre-clear:
 - any outside activity for which you will be paid, including a second job.
 - whether or not you will be paid, any affiliation with another business as a director, officer, advisory board member, general partner, owner, consultant, holder of 5% or more of the business' voting equity interests, or in any similar position.

However, the Code does not require you to pre-clear the following activities (although these matters may be subject to clearance or reporting requirements of your business unit):

 - any appointment made by JPMorgan Partners or One Equity Partners to the board of an entity in which the firm holds a venture capital investment.
 - any appointment made by the Private Bank to personal investment corporations or other entities formed to hold real estate or other investments for customers.
 - any appointment by any JPMorgan Chase affiliate to the Board of a mutual fund or pooled investment vehicle managed by such JPMorgan Chase affiliate.
 - any appointment by any JPMorgan Chase affiliate to the board of a special purpose entity established for purposes of a loan workout or bankruptcy proceeding in which JPMorgan Chase has an interest.

- any affiliation with a trade association or other such organization related to your position at JPMorgan Chase.
 - positions with co-op boards, condominium associations, and similar entities the sole business of which is to hold title to and/or manage real property in which you can or do reside.
 - positions with special purpose entities established solely for purposes of your or your family's estate or tax planning or to hold your or your family's real estate or other investments.
- Not-for-profit activities. Not-for-profit activities generally do not require pre-clearance. However, you are required to pre-clear any board or official position with a not-for-profit entity if:
 - the not-for-profit entity is a customer of the firm, other than for branch banking or other routine services (unless you are involved in providing those services).
 - you have been requested to serve in that capacity by JPMorgan Chase or by a customer or supplier.
 - your service would otherwise present a conflict of interest or the appearance of a conflict of interest.
 - Governmental activities. You are required to pre-clear:
 - any government position, including as an elected official and as a member, director, officer or employee of a governmental agency, authority, advisory board, or other board (a school or library board, for example). You must obtain pre-clearance before becoming a candidate for elective office.

Procedures and forms for pre-clearance of these activities are available in the JPMorgan Chase Procedures for Pre-Clearance of Outside Activities.

You must seek a new clearance for a previously approved activity whenever there is any material change in relevant circumstances, whether arising from a change in your job with JPMorgan Chase or in your role with respect to that activity or organization. You must also notify the Office of the Secretary when any approved outside activity terminates.

Note also that publications and speaking engagements relating to the business of JPMorgan Chase must be pre-cleared under Section 3.4 of the Code.

6.4. Political Activities

6.4.1. Political campaign activities and contributions by employees

Volunteering for a political campaign. If you wish to volunteer for a political campaign, you must do so on your own time and as an individual, not as a representative of the firm or any of its affiliates. You may not use any JPMorgan Chase staff, facilities, equipment, supplies, or mailing lists.

When acting as a fundraiser for a candidate or political event, be certain that your activities cannot be viewed as connected with your position with JPMorgan Chase, especially when communicating with colleagues, customers, or suppliers. Contact the Government Affairs Department for further guidance on such activity.

(Note that running for public office is covered by Section 6.3.2.)

Political contributions. You have the right to participate in the political process by making personal contributions from personal funds, subject to applicable legal limits. However, you cannot be reimbursed or otherwise compensated by JPMorgan Chase for any such contribution.

Certain lines of business (for example, Municipal Finance and Asset Management) may have additional policies regarding employees' personal contributions; you are responsible for being aware of, and complying with, any rules applicable to your business unit.

Additionally, you must contact the Government Affairs Department or your local Compliance Officer with respect to a personal political contribution that could violate, or create the appearance of a violation of, the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act or local law. (See Section 5.9 for a discussion of the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act.) Employees need to be especially sensitive when giving to officials who are part of the decision-making process with respect to any matters relating to the firm.

6.4.2. Political contributions and related activities by JPMorgan Chase

Political contributions and gifts. In the U.S., political contributions by corporate entities are strictly regulated by laws at the federal, state and local levels. These laws often prohibit or limit direct monetary contributions made from corporate funds (such as a contribution check or purchase of fundraising event tickets) as well as in-kind contributions (such as the use of corporate facilities or staff, and even the granting of loans or other products at preferential rates). Local law in jurisdictions outside the U.S. can also impose restrictions. Therefore, both within and outside the U.S.,

- all requests for firm support (either through monetary or in-kind contributions) of political events, political candidates and their campaigns, political parties, or political committees must be pre-approved and processed by the Government Affairs Department.
- political contributions proposed to be made by or on behalf of the firm must be pre-cleared by the Government Affairs Department.
- all gifts to governmental officials to be made by or on behalf of the firm (including items of value, transportation, lodging, meals, entertainment, and services), must be pre-cleared by the Government Affairs Department in the U.S., and by the local Compliance unit in jurisdictions outside the U.S.. This includes extending invitations to governmental officials to attend non-profit or other special events for which the firm has paid.

Lobbying by or on behalf of JPMorgan Chase. All lobbying activities, including the retention of outside lobbyists, must be pre-cleared through the Government Affairs Department. Note that the federal government and each state has its own definitions and regulations regarding lobbying of governmental employees, and what might seem like a simple meeting could trigger a reporting requirement; if in doubt, contact Government Affairs.

6.5. Accepting gifts, meals, and entertainment from customers, suppliers, and others doing business with JPMorgan Chase

A gift may take many forms. For the purposes of the Code, the term “gift” includes anything of value for which you are not required to pay the retail or usual and customary cost. A gift may include meals or refreshments, goods, services, tickets to entertainment or sporting events, or the use of a residence, vacation home or other accommodations.

Gifts given by others to members of your family, to those with whom you have a close personal relationship, and to charities designated by you, are considered to be gifts to you for purposes of the Code.

You may never, except as provided in the Code:

- Solicit for yourself or for anyone else (other than the firm) anything of value from anyone in return for any business, service, or confidential information of the firm.
- accept anything of value, directly or indirectly (other than bona fide salary, wages, awards, and fees paid by or to the firm), from anyone in connection with the business of the firm, either before or after a transaction is discussed or consummated.

Note that the restrictions in this section 6.5 are not intended to apply to gifts based on obvious family (such as your parents, children, or spouse) or close personal friendships, where the circumstances make it clear that it is the relationship rather than the firm's business that is the motivating factor.

6.5.1. What you may accept

Acceptance of gifts of any kind (including entertainment and hospitality) from persons that do business with JPMorgan Chase is generally discouraged. Subject to the prohibitions in Section 6.5.2 and to any more restrictive policies your business unit may have, the following gifts may be accepted on infrequent occasions from a party that does business with JPMorgan Chase, if it is clear that the party is not trying to influence or reward you in connection with any business decision or transaction and the gift is unsolicited:

- gifts that have a nominal retail value and are given on an occasion when gifts are customary (on a birthday or major holiday, or on the occasion of a promotion or retirement, for example; note that gifts given by a customer in appreciation for good service are generally not permitted, as we consider excellent service to be part of our job and not out of the ordinary).
- advertising or promotional material of nominal retail value, such as pens, pencils, note pads, key chains, calendars, and similar items.

- discounts and rebates on merchandise or services that are offered to the general public, or to all employees under a plan negotiated by JPMorgan Chase.
- customary mementos at closing dinners, permitted golf outings, and similar functions.
- civic, charitable, educational, or religious organization awards for recognition of service and accomplishment having a nominal retail value.
- meals, refreshments, and entertainment in the course of a meeting or other occasion, provided:
 - the purpose is business-related,
 - your host is present,
 - your attendance is related to your duties with JPMorgan Chase,
 - the level of expense is reasonable and customary in the context of your business and the relationship with the host,
 - the expense would be paid for by JPMorgan Chase as a reasonable business expense if not paid for by the host, and
 - the frequency of such invitations from one host is not excessive.
 If you have questions about whether a specific invitation may be accepted under this item --- whether, for example, it is business-related, or reasonable and customary in the context of our business with the host --- discuss it with your manager.
- gifts that are perishable (a fruit basket, for example) and therefore cannot be easily returned, if they are not extravagant and are shared among members of your business unit. If you have questions about whether a gift of perishable items is extravagant, discuss it with your manager.

For the purposes of this Section, a "nominal retail value" means a retail value not exceeding U.S. $100, the approximate equivalent in local currency as determined by your Compliance unit, or such lesser amount as is determined for your business group by your Compliance unit.

Whenever you receive a gift, or an offer of a gift, that is not permitted by this Section 6.5.1, make every effort to refuse or return it. If that isn't possible, notify your manager, your Compliance officer, and the Office of the Secretary to discuss how to deal with the gift.

6.5.2. What you may not accept

Except as approved pursuant to Section 6.5.3, you may not accept the following from any current or prospective customer, supplier, or other party doing business with JPMorgan Chase (even if it is otherwise permitted under Section 6.5.1):

- gifts of cash or cash equivalents (such as gift certificates, gift checks, or securities).
- discounts not available to the general public or to all employees under a plan negotiated by JPMorgan Chase.
- gifts to be delivered in installments.
- bequests or legacies.
- invitations to parties, sports outings, and similar events solely for groups of more than ten JPMorgan Chase employees sponsored by parties that do business with JPMorgan Chase, including golf or other sports or similar outings, year-end parties group dinners, or departmental entertainment.
- travel or accommodation expenses, unless they have been approved in writing by your Senior Manager (travel and accommodations are not considered gifts and may be accepted if they are agreed as part of a business transaction between the party providing the travel or accommodations and JPMorgan Chase).

- tickets for professional sports, concerts or other events for your personal use, other than as permitted under Section 6.5.1, unless you have reimbursed the party providing the tickets for the face value of the tickets (note that solicitation of such tickets is generally inappropriate, even where you do reimburse the party providing them).

6.5.3. Other approvals

Your Senior Manager, your Compliance officer, and the Office of the Secretary together may approve, on a case-by-case basis, the acceptance of a gift that is not specifically permitted under Section 6.5.1, or that is prohibited under Section 6.5.2. Any such approval must be in writing and pursuant to full written disclosure of all relevant facts, including the name of the donor, the circumstances surrounding the offer and acceptance, the nature and approximate value of the gift, and the reason why it cannot or should not be returned. (You may use the Gift Report Form filed under Section 6.5.4, signed by each of your Senior Manager, your Compliance officer, and the Office of the Secretary, for this purpose.)

6.5.4. Required reporting of gifts

You are required to file a Gift Report with respect to:

- any gift that is not permitted under Section 6.5.1 or that is listed in Section 6.5.2, if the gift has not been refused or returned (even if acceptance has been approved in accordance with Section 6.5.3).
- the offer or receipt of any gift that is so lavish it could give rise to an inference of impropriety, whether or not you refuse or return it.
- the offer or receipt of frequent gifts from one source, whether or not you refuse or return them.

The Gift Report form, indicating the disposition of the gift, must be signed by your Senior Manager, your Compliance officer, and the Office of the Secretary. The Office of the Secretary will maintain a record of all reported gifts.

6.6. Providing gifts, meals or entertainment

Local laws or industry-specific regulations often limit or prohibit the giving of gifts by JPMorgan Chase to an employee of a current or prospective customer or supplier. For example, broker-dealers and asset managers are generally subject to regulatory restrictions on providing gifts.

The giving of gifts to governmental officials is in most cases strictly limited by law or regulation. In this instance, gifts include not only an actual item of value, but also the value of transportation, lodging, meals, entertainment, services, or invitation to an event (even if it is for a non-profit entity to which you extend an invitation to a governmental official). However, depending on the jurisdiction, there may be exceptions. All gifts to governmental officials must be pre-cleared by the Government Affairs Department.

Business-related gifts not prohibited by law should be appropriate for the occasion and conform to the Code and JPMorgan Chase's Travel & Entertainment Policies & Procedures.

See also Section 5.9 regarding bribery and the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act and Section 6.4.2 regarding pre-clearance of gifts to governmental officials.

6.7. Charitable solicitations at work; charitable contributions

While the firm encourages its employees to become involved with charitable organizations, there are restrictions on solicitation of customers, suppliers, and fellow employees for contributions. You should become familiar with the relevant policies before engaging in any such activities.

Occasionally customers or suppliers ask that JPMorgan Chase make a contribution to a charity or not-for-profit organization. If it is necessary for business development purposes to make a contribution, you should contact Corporate Philanthropy and Sponsorships to help determine the appropriate level, including consideration of whether the firm has already made a contribution to the organization.

7. PERSONAL SECURITIES AND OTHER FINANCIAL TRANSACTIONS

Your personal investment activities should always be conducted with the Company's reputation in mind and in compliance with all applicable laws and regulations.

7.1. General investment principles

Employees are expected to devote their workdays to serving the interests of our clients and JPMorgan Chase. Accordingly your personal securities and other financial transactions must be oriented towards a philosophy of investment as distinguished from short-term or speculative trading.

In addition to complying with all other Code provisions and relevant policies and procedures, you should observe the following general investment principles in carrying out personal transactions in securities and other financial instruments. (All references to securities should be understood to include all financial instruments, such as equity securities, bonds and other debt securities, convertible securities, derivatives, options, and any stock index.)

- While in possession of inside information about the issuer of any securities or the securities themselves, never buy, sell, or recommend the purchase or sale of such securities for your account or the accounts of others, regardless of whether the inside information is gained through the scope of your employment or elsewhere. If in doubt, don't trade.

- Do not buy or sell securities with knowledge of proposed client trades, trades by JPMorgan Chase or forthcoming research reports.
- Your trading and investment activities must be within your financial means.
- Do not ask for or accept any preferential terms or conditions in connection with any personal trading or investments, unless the terms are available to all persons having comparable portfolios and creditworthiness, or to all employees under a plan negotiated by JPMorgan Chase.
- Limit the risks in your personal account trading. Do not engage in excessive trading activities that represent a high degree of financial risk.
- Trading and investment activities should be for investment purposes and not for short-term trading profits.
- Do not engage in speculative trading, such as trading based on rumors.

7.2. Persons and accounts subject to policies

All personal investment policies that apply to you also apply to transactions for the account of your spouse, your domestic partner, your minor children, and any other person to whom you provide significant financial support, as well as to transactions in any other account over which you or any of these persons exercise investment discretion, regardless of beneficial interest. These are referred to as “employee-associated accounts”.

7.3. Trading in JPMorgan Chase securities

7.3.1. Policies applicable to all employees

Purchases and sales of JPMorgan Chase & Co.'s common stock or other securities are subject to the general policies related to personal trading. These policies are applicable to the following transactions (as they are to your other investment activities):

- direct purchases and sales of JPMorgan Chase securities.
- elections involving the JPMorgan Chase & Co. common stock fund in your 401(k) plan, deferred compensation plan, or Employee Stock Purchase Plan, including decisions to increase or decrease contributions or elections that result in increasing or decreasing amounts credited to any common stock account under an employee benefit plan.
- sales of JPMorgan Chase securities to meet a margin call, with or without your personal involvement.
- placing, canceling or amending limit orders with respect to JPMorgan Chase securities.
- entering into, canceling or amending sales plans, sometimes referred to as 10b-5(1) plans, with respect to JPMorgan Chase securities.

However, these policies do not affect automatic purchases of JPMorgan Chase stock in accordance with previously made benefits elections and acquisitions of JPMorgan Chase stock through dividend reinvestment.

Purchases and sales of JPMorgan Chase & Co.'s common stock or other securities are also subject to any more restrictive personal trading policies applicable to your business unit.

In addition, the following restrictions apply to transactions in JPMorgan Chase securities:

- You may not engage in short selling of JPMorgan Chase, except for short sales against a long position already held by you (sometimes referred to as a short sale against the box).

- You may not engage in derivative transactions related to JPMorgan Chase securities except as part of JPMorgan Chase's compensation and benefits programs, or when used for bona fide hedging purposes against a long position already held by you, or as otherwise approved by the Office of the Secretary.
- No transactions in JPMorgan Chase securities, including derivative transactions, may be made in fully managed accounts (accounts over which you have no trading discretion), except dispositions of shares permissibly transferred to the account. Any transfer of securities into a managed account is subject to any restrictions applicable to a sale of such securities.
- Subject to any other JPMorgan Chase policies on personal securities trading applicable to you, you may enter, cancel, or amend limit orders for the purchase or sale of JPMorgan Chase securities.
- Your transactions in JPMorgan Chase securities may be halted at any time the Company finds it necessary or advisable to halt trading by all employees or certain groups of employees.

7.3.2. Employees subject to the "window" and "senior level employees"

Certain employees are restricted from engaging in transactions in JPMorgan Chase securities except during quarterly window periods and are subject to certain other requirements with respect to transactions in JPMorgan Chase securities. This policy affects only those persons who are specifically notified by their management or by the Office of the Secretary that they are subject to it.

Senior level employees (whether subject to the window restrictions or not) must discuss planned transactions in JPMorgan Chase securities with a manager in advance. This requirement applies only to those persons who are listed as "senior level employees" by Human Resources, whether by title such as SVP/MD, or otherwise.

7.4. Trading in securities of clients and suppliers

As a general rule, you should not invest in any securities of a client with which you have or recently had significant dealings or responsibility on behalf of JPMorgan Chase if such investment could be perceived as based on confidential information. You may be subject to broader restrictions imposed by your business unit.

If you have information about or are directly involved in negotiating a contract material to a supplier of JPMorgan Chase you may not invest in the securities of such supplier.

If you own the securities of a company with which we are dealing and you are asked to represent JPMorgan Chase in such dealings you must:

- disclose this fact to your department head and your Compliance unit; and
- obtain prior approval from your Compliance unit before selling such securities.

7.5. Additional policies for certain groups of employees

Any area of JPMorgan Chase may impose more restrictive policies on its employees. Employees of the following areas are subject to the Global Personal Trading Policy and Procedure as well as any applicable supplemental policies:

- Investment Bank
- Asset and Wealth Management
- Commercial Banking
- Private Equity
- Audit
- Office of the General Counsel
- Executive Management and the Executive Committee
- Risk Management
- Global Technology Infrastructure, Corporate Administrative Services, IT Risk Management, and Resiliency Risk Management groups of Central Technology
- Corporate Resources and Media Relations groups of Marketing and Communications
- any other business group specifically notified as being subject to the policy and/or a supplemental policy.

These policies establish trading limitations and include requirements for pre-clearance of personal securities transactions and, in some jurisdictions (including the U.S.), the use of designated brokers.

- business relationships
- products and services
- any other information that the firm considers to be proprietary or confidential information

Code of Conduct: The Code of Conduct, also referred to as the Code, includes all other policies referred to in the Code, and any supplemental policies and procedures that may be applicable to you.

Confidential information: Examples of confidential information:

- trade secrets, security and other business practices or processes, policies or procedures or know-how
- internal and external audit reports
- nonpublic portions of bank examination reports and other reports or information filed with regulators
- software, data processing programs, databases
- customer or supplier lists, telephone or other contact lists and other information about customers
- customer presentations
- information about employees of customers or suppliers
- cost, pricing or financial information
- employee directories, lists, telephone numbers, or other information about employees
- employee compensation, health or personnel records
- business or marketing plans and research
- information posted on the firm's internal websites

Examples of other confidential information about customers:

- the same kind of information that the firm considers confidential about itself
- information obtained from requests or applications for our products or services or as a result of "know your customer" due diligence, such as a personal identification number (for example, depending on the location, a passport, social security or national health number), birth date or financial information disclosed in a loan application

- information about transactions with the firm, such as account balances, mortgage loans or other lending, capital markets or trading transactions
- information obtained from consumer reporting agencies (credit bureaus), such as a person's credit history
- information provided in connection with an advisory assignment, such as financial projections
- any assessment by the firm of a customer's creditworthiness
- the fact that a person is a customer
- information collected through an information collection device from a web server (such as a cookie or a beacon)

Supplier or other third party information that you should assume to be confidential:

- the same kind of information that the firm considers confidential about itself
- information received from others such as financial reports or projections and information about its business plans, customers, suppliers or creditors

Chinese Wall: The term “Chinese Wall” usually refers to the policies that create a system of information barriers designed to limit the flow of inside information from areas that routinely have access to such information to those areas that trade in or sell securities or provide investment advice regarding securities. Certain business areas within JPMorgan Chase require procedures that address more specifically the information flows within such business areas. These are sometimes also referred to as Chinese Walls.

Firm: JPMorgan Chase & Co. and its direct and indirect subsidiaries.

Gift: Anything of value for which you are not required to pay the retail or usual and customary cost. A gift may include meals or refreshments, goods, services, tickets to entertainment or sporting events, or the use of a residence, vacation home or other accommodations.

Inside information: Confidential information that is material, nonpublic information about the securities, activities, or financial condition of a corporation, public entity or other issuer of securities or financial instruments. Material, nonpublic information concerning market developments may also be construed to be inside information.

JPMorgan Chase: JPMorgan Chase & Co. and its direct and indirect subsidiaries.

Material information: Information is "material" when it could have an impact on the market price of securities involved or if it is likely that a reasonable investor would consider the information important in deciding whether to purchase or sell the securities. Information may be material to one issuer but not to another. Information may be material to certain securities of an issuer but not material to all securities of that issuer (e.g., to equity, but not to debt). Examples of information that could be material include:

- mergers, acquisitions, tender offers and restructurings
- substantial nonperforming loans or impending bankruptcy
- securities offerings and repurchases
- a change in earnings and dividends (or estimates of same)
- significant new business products, discoveries and services or the loss of any of these
- a change in an issuer's credit rating by a rating agency
- significant shifts in operating or financial circumstances, such as cash-flow reductions, major write-offs, changes in accounting methods and strikes at major plants

- voluntary calls of debt or preferred stock issues
- significant litigation or litigation developments
- governmental developments that could affect securities markets
- changes in control or management
- developments regarding customers or suppliers (e.g. loss or acquisition of a contract)

Need-to-know: Persons with a “need-to-know” information require access to that information in order to perform the services we are engaged to provide to the party who provided the information to us --- for example, lawyers, accountants and other experts, compliance officers, credit personnel, and senior management personnel. Who “needs to know” any particular information will depend on the specific facts and circumstances; if in doubt, consult the Legal and Compliance Department. Justification of communicating confidential information does not exist simply because the information is helpful to another department in activities that are unrelated to the service or transaction for which the information was obtained. In some circumstances, legal counsel may determine that limited disclosure is required by law (in response to a subpoena, for example) or is otherwise appropriate. These decisions should be made only by the Legal and Compliance Department.

Nonpublic/Public information: Information should be considered nonpublic unless it is clearly public. Information is deemed public once it has been publicly announced or otherwise disseminated in a manner that makes the information available to investors generally. For example, limited disclosure over a private wire service for institutional investors is not considered full disclosure to the public. Information disclosed in a press release distributed through a widely circulated news or wire service would generally be considered public.

Personal fiduciary: A person who has undertaken to act primarily for another's benefit, such as a trustee, executor, attorney-in-fact or guardian, outside the scope of your normal job responsibilities at JPMorgan Chase.

Senior level employee: Any employee listed by Human Resources as a senior level employee (whether by title such as Senior Vice President/Managing Director or otherwise).

Senior Manager: An Executive Committee member or an officer who reports directly to an Executive Committee member.
